History of Labor Day : What it Means

- the U.S. Department of Labor

Labor Day Legislation

The first governmental recognition came through municipal ordinances passed in 1885 and 1886. From these, a movement developed to secure state legislation. The first state bill was introduced into the New York legislature, but the first to become law was passed by Oregon on February 21, 1887. During 1887, four more states - Colorado, Massachusetts, New Jersey, and New York - created the Labor Day holiday by legislative enactment. By the end of the decade Connecticut, Nebraska, and Pennsylvania had followed suit. By 1894, 23 more states had adopted the holiday, and on June 28, 1894, Congress passed an act making the first Monday in September of each year a legal holiday in the District of Columbia and the territories.

Founder of Labor Day

More than a century after the first Labor Day observance, there is still some doubt as to who first proposed the holiday for workers. Some records show that Peter J. McGuire, general secretary of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and a co-founder of the American Federation of Labor, was first in suggesting a day to honor those "who from rude nature have delved and carved all the grandeur we behold."

Labor Day, the first Monday in September, is a creation of the labor movement and is dedicated to the social and economic achievements of American workers. It constitutes a yearly national tribute to the contributions workers have made to the strength, prosperity, and well-being of our country.

The first state bill was passed by Oregon.

But Peter McGuire's place in Labor Day history has not gone unchallenged. Many believe that Matthew Maguire, a machinist, not Peter McGuire, founded the holiday. Recent research seems to support the contention that Matthew Maguire, later the secretary of Local 344 of the International Association of Machinists in Paterson, N.J., proposed the holiday in 1882 while serving as secretary of the Central Labor Union in New York. What is clear is that the Central Labor Union adopted a Labor Day proposal and appointed a committee to plan a demonstration and picnic.

The First Labor Day

The first Labor Day holiday was celebrated on Tuesday, September 5, 1882, in New York City, in accordance with the plans of the Central Labor Union. The Central Labor Union held its second Labor Day holiday just a year later, on September 5, 1883. By 1894, 23 more states had adopted the holiday, and on June 28, 1894, President Grover Cleveland signed a law making the first Monday in September of each year a national holiday.

A Nationwide Holiday

The form that the observance and celebration of Labor Day should take was outlined in the first proposal of the holiday - a street parade to exhibit to the public "the strength and esprit de corps of the trade and labor organizations" of the community, followed by a festival for the recreation and amusement of the workers and their families. This became the pattern for the celebrations of Labor Day. Speeches by prominent men and women were introduced later, as more emphasis was placed upon the economic and civic significance of the holiday. Still later, by a resolution of the American Federation of Labor convention of 1909, the Sunday preceding Labor Day was adopted as Labor Sunday and dedicated to the spiritual and educational aspects of the labor movement. The character of the Labor Day celebration has changed in recent years, especially in large industrial centers where mass displays

LaPine Community HEALTH

MEETING
COMMUNITY HEALTH
NEEDS IS OUR TOP PRIORITY AT YOUR LOCAL HEALTH CENTER

La Pine Community Health Center (LCHC) is committed to the health and wellness of Central Eastern Oregon communities and offers a variety of medical, behavioral, dietary and outreach services. In order to better serve the growing and diverse population of Lake County, LCHC's Christmas Valley location is undergoing a few changes.

Beginning September 8th, 2020 your local health center in Christmas Valley will be open Monday through Friday from 8:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m., which provides additional availability on Fridays. The health center's lab will also be able to offer appointments every weekday morning, extending lab appointment opportunities to include Fridays and x-ray services will continue to be offered each Tuesday and Thursday. Denise Griffiths, FNP, will see patients Monday through Friday, which will enable her to build long-term, stable patient-provider relationships with more local residents. Michael Allen, MD will continue to come to Christmas Valley two Thursdays each month and will expand his patient base beyond the initial prenatal and complex patients currently under his care. Behavioral health consultant, Beth Erickson, LCSW, will continue to see patients in Christmas Valley every Tuesday and in-person Outreach services appointments will be offered on two Thursdays each month, or by telephone Monday through Friday. Qualifying patients may be eligible for our produce voucher program through Health Education services. Assistance enrolling in or applying for food stamps, energy assistance, Oregon Health Plan (OHP) and transportation services is available through our Outreach department.

These are trying times, for many Oregonians—financially, socially and medically. If you are already a patient, we encourage you to utilize your local health center to maintain optimum health and receive regular check-ups (annual wellness visits). If you are new to the area, please stop in to fill out a new patient packet. Once you establish care you will be eligible to take advantage of the many services we have to offer. At all of LCHC's locations, Veterans are welcomed with open arms and are able to receive Veterans Affairs (VA) authorized services, often eliminating the need for Veterans to travel out of the area unnecessarily.

Our friendly and knowledgeable staff are here to assist you.

For more information call (541) 536-3435, stop by to see us at 87520 Bay Road, Christmas Valley, Oregon or visit our website, www.lapinehealth.org.

We would, also, like to thank our leader, Lois Miles, for her continued support and all her time and effort making this a wonderful club.

and huge parades have proved a problem. This change, however, is more a shift in emphasis and medium of expression. Labor Day addresses by leading union officials, industrialists, educators, clerics, and government officials are given wide coverage in newspapers, radio, and television. The vital force of labor added materially to the highest standard of living and the greatest production the world has ever known and has brought us closer to the realization of our traditional ideals of economic and political democracy. It is appropriate, therefore, that the nation pays tribute on Labor Day to the creator of so much of the nation's strength, freedom, and leadership — the American worker.

Labor Daze - Pride, Chaos and Kegs on Labor's First 'Day'

On the morning of September 5, 1882, a crowd of spectators filled the sidewalks of lower Manhattan near city hall and along Broadway. They had come early, well before the Labor Day parade marchers, to claim the best vantage points from which to view the first Labor Day parade. A newspaper account of the day described "...men on horseback, men wearing regalia, men with society aprons, and men with flags, musical instruments, badges, and all the other paraphernalia of a procession." The police, wary that a riot would break out, were out in force that morning as well. By 9 a.m., columns of police and club-wielding officers on horseback surrounded city hall.

By 10 a.m., the Grand Marshall of the parade, William McCabe, his aides and their police escort were all in place for the start of the parade. There was only one problem: none of the men had moved. The few marchers that had shown up had no music. According to McCabe, the spectators began to suggest that he give up the idea of parading, but he was determined to start on time with the few marchers that had shown up. Suddenly, Mathew Maguire of the Central Labor Union of New York (and probably the father of Labor Day) ran across the lawn and told McCabe that two hundred marchers from the Jewelers Union of Newark Two had just crossed the ferry — and they had a band!

Just after 10 a.m., the marching jewelers turned onto lower Broadway — they were playing "When I First Put This Uniform On" from Patience, an opera by Gilbert and Sullivan. The police escort then took its place in the street. When the jewelers marched past McCabe and his aides, they followed in behind. Then, spectators began to join the march. Eventually, there were 700 men in line in the first of three divisions of Labor Day marchers. Final reports of the total number of marchers ranged from 10,000 to 20,000 men and women.

With all of the pieces in place, the parade marched through lower Manhattan. The New York Tribune reported that: "The windows and roofs and even the lamp posts and awning frames were occupied by persons anxious to get a good view of the first parade in New York of workingmen of all trades united in one organization."

At noon, the marchers arrived at Reservoir Park, the termination point of the parade. While some returned to work, most continued on to the post-parade party at Wendel's Elm Park at 92nd Street and Ninth Avenue; even some unions that had not participated in the parade showed up to join in the post-parade festivities that included speeches, a picnic, an abundance of cigars, and "Lager beer kegs... mounted in every conceivable place." From 1 p.m. until 9 p.m. that night, nearly 25,000 union members and their families filled the park and celebrated the very first, and almost entirely disastrous, Labor Day Celebration.

Enjoy Your Labor Day!

OREGON WOMEN OF THE CENTURY HONORED

Top row: Gert Boyle, Beatrice Morrow Cannady, Margaret Carter, Edith Green, and Kathryn Harrison.

Bottom row: Jeanne Holm, Maureen Neuberger, Norma Paulus, Esther Pohl Lovejoy, and Barbara Roberts.

The newspaper invited partners in each of the 50 states, the District of Columbia, and American territories to name 10 women as "Women of the Century."

In Oregon the Statesman Journal sponsored the project bringing together a blue-ribbon panel to select the 10 women who made the most important contributions to the state and to the country since the passing of the 19th amendment in 1920.

The women chosen spanned the century and included politicians, civil rights activists and an air force general.

Former Sen. Margaret Carter made history as the first African USA Today in partnership with the Salem Statesman Journal is celebrating the 100th anniversary of women's right to vote by honoring 10 Oregon women, including civil-rights pioneer Beatrice Morrow Cannady, Grande Ronde tribal leader Kathryn Harrison and former Sen. Margaret Carter.

American woman elected pro tempore of the Senate.

A community college counselor for many years, she also served as president of the Urban League of Portland and in Oregon Department of Human Services. Former Sen. Carter expressed her gratitude for the award saying: "I am honored to have been selected to participate with women who have given so much to our State and National Community."

"Women whose lives made such a great difference in giving hope and showing perseverance daily. Such strength and vitality is remarkable."

Oregon's Women of the Century are:

- Gert Boyle who died in 2019, was a businesswoman who was key to the success of the iconic Pacific Northwest brand Columbia Sportswear. Boyle became a household name as the face of the company's advertising campaigns.
- Beatrice Morrow Cannady: a crusading attorney and civil rights pioneer, Cannady edited The Advocate, a Black newspaper published in Portland between 1903-1936, and helped found the Portland chapter of the NAACP. She died in 1974.
- Margaret Carter: In 1984, Carter became the first African American woman elected to the Oregon Legislature. She spent almost 28 years serving in either the Oregon House or Senate. She is in her 80's and lives in Portland.
- Edith Green, a Democrat in the U.S. Congress who helped push through legislation that led to Title IX, landmark legislation that opened the door for millions of female athletes. A former school teacher, radio commentator and lobbyist, she became an important figure in Oregon politics when she was elected to Congress in 1955. She served 10 terms and few women in Congress have left such a substantial legacy. She died in 1987.
- Kathryn Harrison: the first woman to be elected chair of the Tribal Council of the Confederated Tribes of Grand Ronde, she continues to contribute to the tribe in her 90s.
- Jeanne Holm: the first female one-star general in the U.S. Air Force and first two-star general in any branch of service. She was a driving force behind the expansion of women's roles in the military. She retired in 1975 and served as Special Assistant on Women for President Ford and held positions during the Carter and Reagan administrations. She died in 2010 at the age of 88.
- Maureen Neuberger: who remains the first and only woman from Oregon to serve in the U.S. Senate. She focused on environmental and health issues, including sponsorship of one of the first bills to require warning labels on cigarette packaging. She died in 2000.
- Norma Paulus: another pioneering politician who served as Oregon's first female secretary of state, helping pioneer the use of vote-by-mail in the state. In the Oregon House of Representatives, she was a key proponent of Oregon's path breaking land-use laws. She died in 2019 at the age of 85.
- Esther Pohl Lovejoy: one of Oregon's earlier women physicians, a public health pioneer, suffrage activist, congressional candidate and a central figure in early efforts to organization international medical relief work. In 1907, she was appointed chairman of the Portland Board of Health, the first woman in the U.S. to hold such a position in a major city. She died in 1967.
- Barbara Roberts: the first woman to serve as Oregon Governor, inaugurated Jan. 14, 1991. The descendant of Oregon Trail pioneers and a fourth-generation Oregonian, she began her career in public service as an advocate for the educational rights of her autistic son. Her efforts resulted in one of the nation's first special-education laws. She's in her 80s and still lives in Portland.

HAPPY ANNIVERSARY

Paul Tsatskowski and Linda Freeman are celebrating 59 years of marriage on September 2nd.

Paul and Linda met on a blind date set up by friends. Paul was fresh out of the Army and Linda was working as a secretary for the State of Oregon. Linda says that she was hesitant to go on the blind date, but as fate would have it things turned out very well. They were married on September 2, 1961 in Aurora, Oregon.

They later moved to Salem where their daughter Kimberly was born in 1964.

In 1998 they moved from Salem to Christmas Valley.

As a result of this blessed union they, also, have been blessed with four grandsons and three great-grandchildren.

They look forward to many more years together.

LIBRARY ACOUSTIC PANEL INSTALLATION

LAKEVIEW, OR— To improve the sound quality in the Main Library in Lakeview, acoustic panels will be installed over the next month. Portions of the building, including some books and the library meeting room, may be inaccessible to the public on certain days. Library staff ask for your patience with extra time required to obtain your materials and with any construction noise.

The library meeting room is temporarily closed to public use while the acoustic panels are installed. Installation requires construction workers to use a lift inside the building. As workers install panels in different parts of the library, different sections of shelving will be closed for the safety of library patrons. Library staff recommend allowing extra time to get library materials as staff may only have access to pull holds once per day when shelves are closed for installation.

"We are very excited to have acoustic panels installed. Everyone will notice much better sound quality with less echoing, especially in the meeting room," said Amy Hutchinson, Library Director. Funding for installation of the panels was provided by the Fred W. Fields Fund and the Jerome S. and Barbara Bischoff Library Subfund of the Oregon Community Foundation as well as the Lake County Library Endowment Fund.

After acoustic panels are installed, wood window trim is the largest remaining interior work to complete. Library staff and Building Committee are working to obtain updated cost information and raise funds for that work. Questions about the new Main Library project may be directed to Amy Hutchinson, Library Director, at 541-957-6019 or amyh@lakecountylibrary.org.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

I ride my horse quite often at the Christmas Valley Rodeo Grounds Arena. I would just like to say what a wonderful job Kenny from Lake County Corrections and his crew are doing refurbishing the arena fencing, building new picnic tables, building new holding pens, mowing and weeding and I am sure more! It is shaping up in a great way. So, thank you! I know that the Christmas Valley Park and Rec board members are, also, working hard on this as well...so thank you all!

It is looking so much better.

-Becky Messner-Womack

Due to extenuating circumstances and irreconcilable differences the "Friends of the Christmas Valley Library" has been dissolved by a unanimous decision of the board.

We hope to generate enthusiasm and excitement for the love of reading and the library by perhaps having a book club in the future.

The Christmas Valley Library is essential to the children and to the entire community. We are dedicated to continue our support of the library individually for now.

Exotic Plants

Coca Shrub: Erythroxylum coca Lam.

Coca family: Erythroxylaceae

Long before the coming of the Spanish Conquistadors, the coca leaf was regarded as a divine gift by the Inca rulers of Peru. Its use was reserved for priests and royalty; for the wealthy and talented, and for others of rank and privilege.

There were exceptions. The common Indians who carried bales of the sacred leaf across the Andes mountains from what is now Bolivia were probably allowed to chew bits of their burden as they trudged along, for under the influence of the drug contained in the leaf, they hardly felt the sharp mountain chill and could travel for days with little food or water. And surely the natives of the steep valleys along the eastern face of the Andes, where the coca shrub grew, chewed the leaves regularly – as their descendants do today – to still the hunger pangs and numb the fatigue that are constant facts of life in such a poor, harsh land.

But by the time the Spaniard Pizarro arrived with some 200 men, the rigid control of coca leaves had been relaxed. Nearly everyone chewed them, and they were a coin of exchange in the marketplace. The Spanish, having disposed of the Inca nobility, used Indians to till their newly conquered land and to work their mines. Because they found it cheaper to provide the slave laborers with coca than with food and water, they continued to import the divine leaves from across the mountains. And so the drug of the wealthy and powerful became – not for the last time in its history – a device to enslave the common people.

Although the Spanish brought news of the magical coca leaf to Europe, it was more than 300 years before anyone found a use for it. Then its exploitation burgeoned.

In 1860, a German researcher isolated the chemical responsible for the plant's power. He called it cocaine. In 1884, Dr. Carl Koller, a colleague of Sigmund Freud's, discovered that the drug could act as a local anesthetic in eye surgery. As the years passed, other scientists learned that cocaine paralyzed nerve endings responsible for transmitting sensations of pain and so it became a valuable local anesthetic, revolutionizing many surgical and dental procedures. However, because it also stimulated heart and respiratory rates, besides elevating arterial blood pressure, it sometimes did more harm than good to surgical patients.

A French merchant became wealthy by selling a tonic made from coca leaves and a few years later an American druggist became quite wealthy by combining coca leaves with the juice of the cola nut in a sweet syrup he called Coca-Cola. (This was prohibited in the U.S. in 1904.) Some pioneers like Freud in the study of the mind were interested in cocaine's ability to intensify concentration, negate fatigue, and induce a feeling of well-being.

Poets, novelists, and painters began to use it and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle gave the practice the legitimacy of literature when he had his detective, Sherlock Holmes, that cocaine to keep his wits occupied when he had no case to work on.

Today the medicinal uses of cocaine are performed by using synthetics as lignocaine, benzocaine, and procaine – trademark name Novocain – which have cocaine's anesthetic properties but lack its stimulatory side effects. Non-medical use is illegal in the U.S., but widespread abusive non-medical use is among the serious problems of our age.
