WHAT DOES THE TIME-HONORED NURSERY RHYME, "MARY HAD A LITTLE LAMB," HAVE TO DO WITH OUR NATIONAL THANKSGIVING DAY CELEBRATION???

Most of us were taught in school the history of the "first Thanksgiving" with Indians and Pilgrims and a great feast. Seldom, if ever, did we learn of the history of how our traditional Thanksgiving day became a national holiday.

In 1863, Secretary of State William Seward wrote the Thanksgiving Proclamation and Abraham Lincoln issued it. The credit due was poet, writer and editor Sarah Josepha Hale, the author of "Mary's Lamb," the children's poem we know as "Mary Had a Little Lamb," the Godmother of Thanksgiving.

Sarah Josepha Hale was born Sarah Josepha Buell on October 24, 1788, on a small farm in New-Port, NH. Her father, Captain Buell, had fought in the Revolutionary War. He and his wife, Martha Whittlesey-Buell, moved to New Hampshire after the war and settled on the small farm that had belonged to his grandfather. Sarah was educated by her mother who passed on her love of books and her commitment to the basic education of women in order to educate their families. Sarah's older brother, Horatio, attended Dartmouth. During his summers at home he tutored Sarah in the subjects he was learning: Latin, philosophy, geography, literature, and more. Colleges were not open to women; however, Sarah gained the equivalent of a college education through Horatio and his teachings.

From 1806 to 1813 Sarah used her education to become a teacher in a private school for boys and girls near her home, at a time when women teachers were uncommon.

In October 1813, Sarah married David Hale, a young lawyer. In the evenings they read and studied together. He tutored her in French and botany, and encouraged her to write for local publications. She would later credit him with helping her write more clearly. They had four children and one on the way when in 1822, David Hale died of pneumonia. She wore mourning black for the rest of her days in honor of her husband.

Sarah, now in her mid-30s, was left with five children to raise and educate on her own. Without financial means to care for herself and her small family,

Sarah decided to try earning a living writing, one of the few vocations available for women. She submitted her work to magazines and newspapers, and some of her work was published under the pseudonym "Cordelia." In 1823 she published a book of poems, and in 1827 she published her first novel, Northwood, a Tale of New England. In her novel she devoted an entire chapter on the subject of the tradition of an annual Thanksgiving holiday that she had grown up regularly celebrating.

In 1830, Sarah helped found the American Ladies Magazine, which she used as a platform to promote women's issues. In 1837, she was offered the role of editor of the Godey's Lady Book, where she would remain for 40 years, steering the magazine to a circulation of more than 150,000 by the eve of the Civil War and turning it into one of the most influential periodicals in the country. She did much to encourage original work by American writers. Among those published in the Lady's Book, Edgar Allan Poe, Nathaniel Hawthorne, Ralph Waldo Emerson, and Harriet Beecher Stowe. She also championed the call for female education in the liberal arts and for more women teachers, and hers was among the most persuasive voices that encouraged the founding of Vassar College, the second degree-granting institution of higher education

LIBRARY HOSTS LITERACY BABY SHOWERS

LAKEVIEW, OR—Lake County Libraries will be hosting a Zoom Literacy Baby Showers for parents of babies one year old or younger, as well as for expectant parents. Attending parents and babies will receive a bag of books, baby supplies, some snacks, and participate in a raffle for prizes from local businesses. The Baby Shower will be held via Zoom Saturday, November 21st at 3:30 PM.

The showers are a great opportunity for the community to celebrate new families, and the library has received many donations from local businesses and crafters. Since 90% of brain development happens by the age of six, library staff will demonstrate ways parents can make sure their child is ready to learn at kindergarten.

If you have a child who was born in the fall of 2019 or later or are currently expecting, or if you know of a family who has a child that age, please contact David at 541-947-6019 with a mailing address and Lake County Libraries will include them on the invitation list. The event will be held via Zoom, and Zoom participants will be able to pick up their gifts from their local library after.

For more information about this program or to add someone to the invitation list, please contact Youth Library Assistant David Lev at davidl@lakecountylibrary.org or 541-947-6974. This program is made possible by the State of Oregon Ready to Read Grant, partnership with Lake County Public Health, and many local donors.

for women in the United States.

While at Godey's, Sarah often wrote editorials and articles about her beloved Thanksgiving holiday and she lobbied State and Federal government officials to pass legislation creating a fixed, national day of thanks on the last Thursday of November. She believed that this would unify and help ease the growing tensions and divisions between the northern and southern parts of the country. She campaigned for 15 years and by 1854, more than 30 states and U.S. territories had a Thanksgiving celebration on the books. Even though her efforts paid off, her main goal of a fixed national holiday remained unfulfilled.

The outbreak of war in April 1861 fueled Sarah Josepha Hale's fire to create such a holiday. She continued to write editorials on the subject, urging Americans to "put aside sectional feelings and local incidents" and rally around the unifying cause of Thanksgiving. And the holiday continued, despite hostilities, in both the Union and the Confederacy. In 1861 and 1862, confederate President Jefferson Davis issued Thanksgiving Day proclamations following Southern victories. Abraham Lincoln himself called for a day of thanks in April 1862, following Union victories at Fort Donelson, Fort Henry and at Shiloh, and again in 1863 after the Battle of Gettysburg.

Shortly after Lincoln's summer proclamation, Sarah wrote to President Lincoln and Secretary of State William Seward, once again urging them to institute a fixed national Thanksgiving day the last Thursday in November, citing that only the chief executive had the power to make the holiday, "permanently, an American custom and institution."

Within a week of Sarah Josepha Hale's letter, Seward had drafted Lincoln's official proclamation fixing the national observation of Thanksgiving on the final Thursday in November. The two men hoped that this would "heal the wounds of the nation."

Letter From Sarah J. Hale to Abraham Lincoln Published
as originally written:

Philadelphia, Sept. 28th 1863.

Sir.-

Permit me, as Editress of the "Lady's Book", to request a few minutes of your precious time, while laying before you a subject of deep interest to myself and — as I trust — even to the President of our Republic, of some importance. This subject is to have the day of our annual Thanksgiving made a National and fixed Union Festival.

You may have observed that, for some years past, there has been an increasing interest felt in our land to have the Thanksgiving held on the same day, in all the States; it now needs National recognition and authoritative fixation, only, to become permanently, an American custom and institution.

Enclosed are three papers (being printed these are easily read) which will make the idea and its progress clear and show also the popularity of the plan.

For the last fifteen years I have set forth this idea in the "Lady's Book", and placed the papers before the Governors of all the States and Territories — also I have sent these to our Ministers abroad, and our Missionaries to the heathen — and commanders in the Navy. From the recipients I have received uniformly the most kind approval. Two of these letters, one from Governor (now General) Banks and one from Governor Morgan are enclosed; both gentlemen as you will see, have nobly aided to bring about the desired Thanksgiving Union. But I find there are obstacles not possible to be overcome without legislative aid — that each State should, by statute, make it obligatory on the Governor to appoint the last Thursday of November, annually, as Thanksgiving Day; — or, as this way would require years to be realized, it has occurred to me that a proclamation from the President of the United States would be the best, surest and most fitting method of National appointment.

I have written to my friend, Hon. Wm. H. Seward, and requested him to confer with President Lincoln on this subject As the President of the United States has the power of appointments for the District of Columbia and the Territories; also for the Army and Navy and all American citizens abroad who claim protection from the U. S. Flag — could he not, with right as well as duty, issue his proclamation for a Day of National Thanksgiving for all the above classes of persons? And would it not be fitting and patriotic for him to appeal to the Governors of all the States, inviting and commending these to unite in issuing proclamations for the last Thursday in November as the Day of Thanksgiving for the people of each State? Thus the great Union Festival of America would be established.

Thanksgiving Celebration

Now the purpose of this letter is to entreat President Lincoln to put forth his Proclamation, appointing the last Thursday in November (which falls this year on the 26th) as the National Thanksgiving for all those classes of people who are under the National Government particularly, and commending this Union Thanksgiving to each State Executive: thus, by the noble example and action of the President of the United States, the permanency and unity of our Great American Festival of Thanksgiving would be forever secured.

An immediate proclamation would be necessary, so as to reach all the States in season for State appointments, also to anticipate the early appointments by Governors.

Excuse the liberty I have taken.

With profound respect.

Yours truly,
Sarah Josepha Hale,

The BEST Way To Roast A Turkey

Recipe courtesy of Old World Garden Farms

Ingredients:

- 1 whole turkey thawed
- 1 cup Kosher salt
- 1 cup of butter
- 4 teaspoons dried sage
- 2 teaspoons dried thyme
- 2 Tablespoons chopped garlic

Instructions:

To make the brine:

1. Boil 1 qt. water and add salt, stirring until dissolved. Add 2 qts. of cold water and let cool to room temperature.
2. Prepare thawed turkey by removing neck, tail, and giblets and save for broth if you would like. Wash and pat dry.
3. Lower turkey into a large pot/container (we use a food grade 5 gallon bucket). If whole turkey isn't submerged, make more brine, cool, and add. Place in refrigerator and cover at least 12 hours. *If you don't have enough space in the refrigerator, add ice to the brine and ice frequently to keep cool.

To make the butter rub:

In a food processor, add butter, sage, thyme, and garlic until smooth. *You can also do this by hand and up to 4 days ahead of time – storing in an air-tight container in the refrigerator.

To prepare the turkey:

1. Preheat oven to 350° F.
2. Lift turkey from brine, rinse, and pat dry.
3. Set turkey on a rack in a large roasting pan making sure the entire turkey is in the pan.
4. Slide your fingers between skin and flesh of turkey to make pockets of space at the breast, back, and leg areas.
5. Using your fingers, slide about half of herb butter under skin in all the pockets.
6. Rub remaining butter on the outer surface of the turkey.
7. Place on a roasting rack, breast side up.
8. Roast turkey, basting occasionally with pan drippings, until a meat thermometer inserted straight down through thickest part of breast to the bone registers 165 degrees, about 2 to 3 hours.
9. *Cook time varies with size of turkey and individual ovens – general timeframes are as follows:
8-12 lb turkey: 2 3/4-3 hours; 12-14 lb turkey: 3- 3 3/4 hours; 14-18 lb turkey: 3 3/4 -4 1/4 hours; 18-20 lb turkey: 4 1/4 -4 1/2 hours; 20-24 lb turkey: 4 1/2 -5 hours

Recipe Notes: Transfer turkey to a platter and tent with foil. Let rest in a warm place 15 to 30 minutes, then carve.

CRITTER CORNER

What are Crepuscular Animals?

By Jaymi Heimbuch

Who are the critters out at those in-between hours of dawn and dusk?

Most of us are familiar with two of the terms for periods of activity in plants and animals: nocturnal and diurnal. Nocturnal animals, like bats, are active at night and diurnal animals, like humans, are active during the day. But there's another major category for activity for animals: crepuscular.

Crepuscular, a word drawn from the Latin word for "twilight," is a term for animals that are active primarily at dawn and dusk. There's a very intelligent reason for picking these dimly lit, in-between hours to be active: crepuscular critters are avoiding predators. Many predators are most active at the peak hours of daylight and darkness, so animals like rabbits, which are a prey species for countless carnivores, are active during twilight hours when predators are already tired from a night of hunting, or are just waking up. Plus, it's tough to see during these hours, a fact that gives prey species an added edge in hiding from or escaping predators.

In hot areas, there's another reason for crepuscular activity: it allows animals to be active when the temperature is most reasonable. Desert animals can escape the heat of midday and the chill of mid-night by being active at dawn and dusk instead. And some species may shift from being nocturnal or diurnal to being crepuscular due to environmental factors such as competition with other species — for example, some owl species may be crepuscular to avoid competition with other raptor species — or disturbance from human activity.

Crepuscular activity is further broken down into matutinal animals, which are most active in the morning, and vespertine animals, which are most active at dusk.

The domestic house cat is a great example of a crepuscular animal, as are rabbits, deer, some bat species, bears, skunks, bobcats, possums, and many, many more species.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Thank you! Thank you! Thank you!

We would like to thank all of you that helped save the City of Paisley from the Brattain Fire. Commissioner Mark Albertson, his wife Tonia, and a multitude of other volunteers worked tirelessly and continually to keep the volunteer firefighters and local residents supplied with everything we could possibly need. Commissioner Williams also spent a lot of time and his presence was greatly appreciated. Local law enforcement, led by Deputy Tague, was here from the beginning to the end. Our fantastic Paisley Volunteer Fire Department was supported by crews from the north end of the county, Warner Valley, Thomas Creek West Side Fire Department in their efforts to protect structures.

Our local wildland fire fighters working with local government crews are the ones who put the damper on the fire with a successful back burn. They also continued to steer the fire around the town. To our knowledge, all of this was accomplished without any accidents or loss of any inhabited structures.

We feel like it is a miracle that Paisley was untouched. We just want to say thank you to all of you that risked your neck to save our City.

We are also proud of our citizens; they are such a tough bunch. In six years we've had to do this three times. We've heard no complaining or grumbling, everyone just jumped in and did what was needed. You are a very special group of people. Many members of the federal team from the east were very impressed with our small city and all the people that are Lake County Strong!

It is so sweet to wake up in our own beds in our own homes after this disaster.

May God Bless you All!!

Sincerely,

City of Paisley
