New Year's Traditions and Celebrations

In many countries, New Year's celebrations begin on the evening of December 31—New Year's Eve—and continue into the early hours of January 1. Revelers often enjoy meals and snacks thought to bestow good luck for the coming year. In Spain and several other Spanish-speaking countries, people bolt down a dozen grapes—symbolizing their hopes for the months ahead—right before midnight. In many parts of the world, traditional New Year's dishes feature legumes, which are thought to resemble coins and herald future financial success; examples include lentils in Italy and black-eyed peas in the southern United States. Because pigs represent progress and prosperity in some cultures, pork appears on the New Year's Eve table in Cuba, Austria, Hungary, Portugal and other countries. Ring-shaped cakes and pastries, a sign that the year has come full circle, round out the feast in the Netherlands, Mexico, Greece and elsewhere. In Sweden and Norway, meanwhile, rice pudding with an almond hidden inside is served on New Year's Eve; it is said that whoever finds the nut can expect 12 months of good fortune.

Other customs that are common worldwide include watching fireworks and singing songs to welcome the new year, including the ever-popular "Auld Lang Syne" in many English-speaking countries. The practice of making resolutions for the new year is thought to have first caught on among the ancient Babylonians, who made promises in order to earn the favor of the gods and start the year off on the right foot. (They would reportedly vow to pay off debts and return borrowed farm equipment.)

In the United States, the most iconic New Year's tradition is the dropping of a giant ball in New York City's Times Square night. Millions of world watch the en place almost every year. Over time, the ball has grown from a 700-pound to a brightly pat-foot in diameter and 12,000 pounds. Vari-across America have versions of the Times Square ritual, orga- of items ranging from pickles (Dillsburg, Pennsylvania) to possums (Tallapoosa, Georgia) at midnight on New Year's Eve.

WHAT ABOUT THOSE NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTIONS?

By Sarah Pruitt

The custom of making New Year's resolutions has been around for thousands of years, but it hasn't always looked the way it does today.

The ancient Babylonians are said to have been the first people to make New Year's resolutions, some 4,000 years ago. They were also the first to hold recorded celebrations in honor of the new year—though for them the year began not in January but in mid-March, when the crops were planted. During a massive 12-day religious festival known as Akitu, the Babylonians crowned a new king or reaffirmed their loyalty to the reigning king. They also made promises to the gods to pay their debts and return any objects they had borrowed. These promises could be considered the forerunners of our New Year's resolutions. If the Babylonians kept to their word, their (pagan) gods would bestow favor on them for the coming year. If not, they would fall out of the gods' favor—a place no one wanted to be.

A similar practice occurred in ancient Rome, after the reform-minded emperor Julius Caesar tinkered with the calendar and established January 1 as the beginning of the new year circa 46 B.C. Named for Janus, the two-faced god whose spirit inhabited doorways and arches, January had special significance for the Romans. Believing that Janus symbolically looked backwards into the previous year and ahead into the future, the Romans offered sacrifices to the deity and made promises of good conduct for the coming year.

For early Christians, the first day of the new year became the traditional occasion for thinking about one's past mistakes and resolving to do and be better in the future. In 1740, the English clergyman John Wesley, founder of Methodism, created the Covenant Renewal Service, most commonly held on New Year's Eve or New Year's Day. Also known as known as watch night services, they included readings from Scriptures and hymn singing, and served as a spiritual alternative to the raucous celebrations normally held to celebrate the coming of the new year. Now popular within evangelical Protestant churches, especially African American denominations and congregations, watch night services held on New Year's Eve are often spent praying and making resolutions for the coming year.

Despite the tradition's religious roots, New Year's resolutions today are a mostly secular practice. Instead of making promises to the gods, most people make resolutions only to themselves, and focus purely on self-improvement (which may explain why such resolutions seem so hard to follow through on). According to recent research, while as many as 45 percent of Americans say they usually make New Year's resolutions, only 8 percent are successful in achieving their goals. But that dismal record probably won't stop people from making resolutions anytime soon—after all, we've had about 4,000 years of practice.

5 Of The Most Popular (And Commonly Broken) New Year Resolutions

- Lose weight.
- Exercise.
- Quit smoking.
- Quit drinking.
- Get a new job.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Thank You

I would like to thank, with all my heart, the people involved in getting me to the hospital December 13, 2020. The ambulance gals could not have been better, nicer or kinder. The minister and guys who left their special breakfast to help. Who does that? They prayed for me before we left and then several people looked in on my husband to make sure he was okay.

Thank you precious people for your care.

~John and Jeane Duncan

I would like to thank the wonderful couple who dropped off 20 dozen eggs for distribution to those in need this holiday season.

Your donation was distributed to needy households throughout Christmas Valley and to the Soup Kitchen.

Everyone who received them were very grateful and appreciative.

Thank you and thank your chickens.

NORTH LAKE COUNTY EMS SEEKS APPROVAL FOR MAY BALLOT

North Lake County EMS is a non-profit ambulance service in Christmas Valley. It has been in existence since 1959. We are averaging 200 ambulance runs per year. Our services are available to all regardless of their ability to pay.

Over the last ten years we have doubled our ambulance call volume which is straining our already over worked and dwindling volunteer staff. Since that time we began researching the financial feasibility of becoming a tax base funded special district which would allow us to have paid personnel to overcome this issue.

A petition was circulated throughout the community and the signature quota was met. Now, the County Commissioners are required to hold two public hearings before approving a move to the May ballot. The first hearing is set for January 6 at the County Commissioners meeting tentatively scheduled for Christmas Valley.

If after the second hearing approval is given to advance to the May ballot The NLCEMS group will begin informational meetings in February, March, April and May to explain their history, current funding, WHY this tax base is needed and the projected cost.

If you've ever had a few too many drinks on a night out, you know what the next morning can bring. The nausea, headache, parched mouth, and fatigue are telltale signs you've got a serious hangover.

Each of these symptoms stems from a different cause. Alcohol disrupts sleep and leaves you groggy in the morning. Drinking widens your blood vessels, which can trigger headaches. Alcohol also irritates the lining of your stomach, leading to nausea and sometimes diarrhea.

For almost as long as humans have had hangovers, we've tried to cure them with remedies that run the gamut from vitamin B to pickle juice. Some hangover treatments work better than others, but none is an actual cure. The only way to avoid a hangover is to limit how much you drink or avoid alcohol entirely. And if you find that hangovers are affecting your work or relationships, talk to your doctor about your drinking.

That said, a few hangover remedies can bring you relief from at least some of your symptoms. Here are a few tips to try.

Water.

A big glass of water might be the easiest hangover solution. Alcohol dehydrates you by increasing the amount of urine your kidneys make. You also lose fluid when you sweat, vomit, or have diarrhea after a night of bingeing. Dehydration causes symptoms like a dry mouth and headache.

After a night of merrymaking, drink water before you go to bed. It will curb the effects of the booze in the morning. Another drink of water when you wake up will help keep you hydrated. Have a sports drink to replace the sodium, potassium, and other electrolytes you've lost from vomiting or diarrhea.

Some people say that getting fluids through an IV can help ease hangover symptoms. This method has the informal name of "drip bar." It can be pricey, and health insurance doesn't cover the bill. But there's no need to pay for IV fluids when you can drink a glass of water for free. IVs also carry risks like infection and blood clots.

Korean Pear.

Korean pear (Asian pear) juice is an old-school hangover remedy. Research shows that drinking about 7 1/2 ounces helps lower blood alcohol levels and makes hangovers less intense. The catch is, you need to drink it before you have alcohol. Drinking it afterward won't work.

Researchers say Korean pears might work with your body's chemistry to break down alcohol faster. Only a couple of studies have been done, which is far from proof that this hangover remedy works. But if you can find Korean pear juice at your local supermarket, it doesn't hurt to try a glass before you go out drinking.

Ginseng.

This root has been a feature of Chinese medicine for thousands of years. Herbalists use it to treat ailments ranging from stress to asthma. In one small study, a drink made from red ginseng cut down hangover symptoms. An unrelated herb that goes by a similar name, Siberian ginseng extract, also improved hangover symptoms like headache, dizziness, and stomachache. But the Siberian type isn't the ginseng used in Chinese medicine.

Ginseng is safe for most people. Check with your doctor before using it if you have diabetes or high blood pressure. Some evidence suggests it might affect blood sugar and blood pressure levels. Phyllanthus Amarus.

This medicinal herb grows along tropical coasts. It treats liver, kidney, and stomach ailments. In one small study, taking Phyllanthus amarus extract twice a day for 10 days helped lower blood alcohol levels, ease hangover symptoms, and improve mood in regular drinkers.

You can find extracts made from this herb online and in health food stores. Some of these products go by the name "stone breaker" herb. That's because it may help reduce risk for kidney stones.

Carbs.

Alcohol lowers your blood sugar. That may explain the dizziness and shaking some people get with a hangover. Your brain needs carbs for fuel. Have a couple of slices of wheat toast or a few whole-grain crackers to bring those blood sugar levels back up to normal. You'll give yourself an energy boost, too.

Pain Relievers.

An over-the-counter pain reliever will calm a pounding headache. Just be careful how much you take. NSAIDs like ibuprofen and aspirin irritate the stomach, which could make nausea worse. Avoid acetaminophen when you have a hangover. It can worsen the bad effects of alcohol on your liver.

'Hair of the Dog'

The idea behind this popular hangover remedy is that taking another drink will relieve the effects of the last few you had. The name comes from an old folk tale that says the way to treat a dog bite is to cover the wound with hair taken from the dog that bit you.

But the truth is drinking again will just throw your body back into the same destructive cycle without giving it time to heal. Experts don't recommend trying this method.

Perhaps the best and most effective method is abstinence.

"I would not put a thief in my mouth to steal my brains."

Exotic Plants

Irish Moss - Chondrus crispus (L) stackh.

Carrageen Family : Gigartinaceae

During the potato famine of the mid-19th century, thousands of beleaguered Irish saved themselves from starvation by eating the bushy seaweed known as Irish Moss. They were following the example of many generations of hungry poor folk in their own land and other lands that border the North Atlantic Ocean. It is an example that has been followed by many since, when hard times have pressed. In more bounteous times, the same humble seaweed has served as an effective laxative and as a home remedy for sore throats and chapped skin. It is also used as a filler and stretcher of other foods.

Also known as carrageen from the village in southeastern Ireland where the seaweed is plentiful, Irish Moss is found clinging to the submerged rocks along the shorelines of Canada, New England, the British Isles, and Europe as far south as Portugal. Irish immigrants who found Irish Moss growing on the rugged shores of Canada and New England were first to gather and use it in America.

Boatmen with rakes harvested Irish Moss throughout the summer, gathering 2-foot-long stems from submerged rocks where they grow. Hand gathered Irish Moss is preferred because it is unmixed with other seaweeds. Workers then rinse the curly red, purple, or yellow-green plants to let them dry in the sun for as long as two weeks, which bleaches the color to a grayish or yellowish white. The dried seaweed is soaked in cold fresh water until it swells back to its original bulk. Then it is boiled until it dissolves. The resultant liquid turns to jelly as it cools, and it is the jelly that serves both medicinal and culinary purposes.

It may be eaten as is, or it may be used as a thickener for soups and stews. Boiled with milk and sugar, it makes a tasty white pudding with a high mucilage content - a soothing food for people with sore throats. Irish Moss is also used commercially as a stabilizing agent and thickener in chocolate milk, ice creams, baked goods, and other foods. Irish Moss is also a soothing emollient, or skin softener, and is incorporated as an emulsifier into cosmetics and skin lotions.

Happy New Year to all of you!

I hope you had a Merry Christmas and that this New Year brings you good tidings to all.

God Bless you one and all!

~Linda
