Remembering Oregon State Legislator Senator Jackie Williams for Black History Month

by Sandra Sorensen

Longtime Oregon state legislator Sen. Jackie Winters (R-Salem), the first African American Republican to be elected to the state Legislature, died May 29, 2019, after a lengthy battle with cancer. She was 82.

Colleagues remembered Winters as a force of nature, and described her tenure in Salem as one marked by passion.

Senate President Peter Courtney (D-Salem) called Winters "a noble soul."

"She was a pioneering woman in the Oregon Legislature, a true historical figure," Courtney said in a statement. "I've lost my partner in public service. The Legislature and Oregon has lost a dedicated servant."

"We've lost the best of the best." Winters was re-elected to the Senate in 2018, and though her declining health kept her from the capitol for the last couple months, she had seen her work for juvenile justice reform culminate in the passage of Senate Bill 1008, which would substantially reform Oregon's juvenile justice system and mitigate mandatory minimum sentences for youth, a week prior to her death.

Winters was widowed in 2008. In remarks submitted to a public hearing for SB 1008 last April, she recalled her personal connection to the bill.

"My late husband, Ted Winters, was sent to an adult prison when he was 17 years old," Winters wrote in a statement. "He was deemed beyond redemption by a tough judge. I know if Ted were here today he would be the first to tell you that adult prison hardened him and taught him how to be a better criminal, not a better person...He is proof of how youth can and do change. The most important lesson Ted taught me -- taught all of us -- is that redemption is possible with a second chance."

After the passage of SB 1008, Winters had thanked Rep. Jennifer Williamson for being a central force behind the bill.

"I am heartbroken," Williamson said in response to Winters' death. "I was not only fortunate to call her a friend, but fortunate to have her as a partner in the charge for a more just criminal justice system. I am not quite sure what we will do without her."

Born in Topeka, Kansas, Winters attended Portland Public Schools and Oregon State University. According to her official legislative biography, she began her career in government in 1959 in the Oregon Health Sciences University medical records unit, then worked for the Portland Model Cities Program. In 1979 Gov. Victor Atiyeh appointed her ombudsman of the Office of Economic Opportunity's New Resources Program, where she was a driving force in the creation of the Oregon Food Share Program. She opened Jackie's Ribs in Portland, which would become a small chain of restaurants in the Salem area, in 1985. It was as a businesswoman that she successfully ran for the Oregon House of Representatives in 1998, and then for the state Senate in 2010.

Senate Republican Leader Herman Baertschiger, Jr. (R-GrantsPass) called Winters "an icon."

"Oregon would not be the state it is today without her incredible dedication to the causes and people she fiercely believed in," Baertschiger said in a statement, adding that Winters "leaves a legacy for all Republicans."

Sen. Margaret Carter agreed, calling Winters a "true statesman." She recalled attending National Black Caucus of State Legislators conferences with Winters.

"It didn't matter to her that most of the members of Black Caucus were Democrats," Carter said. "She would get in there and hold her ground. She never hid the fact that she was a Republican. Never, ever. She did not compromise her position."

Presidents' Day Celebrations and Traditions

Like Independence Day, Presidents' Day is traditionally viewed as a time of patriotic celebration and remembrance. In its original incarnation as Washington's Birthday, the holiday gained special meaning during the difficulties of the Great Depression, when portraits of George Washington often graced the front pages of newspapers and magazines every February 22.

In 1932, the date was used to reinstate the Purple Heart, a military decoration originally created by George Washington to honor soldiers killed or wounded while serving in the armed forces. Patriotic groups and the Boy Scouts of America also held celebrations on the day, and in 1938 some 5,000 people attended mass at Saint Patrick's Cathedral in New York City in honor of Washington.

In its modern form, Presidents' Day is used by many patriotic and historical groups as a date for staging celebrations, reenactments and other events. A number of states also require that their public schools spend the days leading up to Presidents' Day teaching students about the historical accomplishments of the presidents.

MORE WINTER AHEAD

Pennsylvania's most famous groundhog emerged from his burrow on a snowy Tuesday, February 2, 2021, morning and saw his shadow, declaring there would be six more weeks of winter. Members of Punxsutawney Phil's "Inner Circle" woke up the furry critter at 7:25 a.m. to see whether he would see his shadow or not.

The spectacle that is Groundhog Day at Gobbler's Knob in Punxsutawney, Pennsylvania went on but this year, it was all virtual because of the coronavirus pandemic.

Shortly after this year's prediction was revealed, one of the members of the inner circle shared a message he said Phil had told him earlier in the day: "After winter, you're looking forward to one of the most beautiful and brightest springs you've ever seen."

COVID VACCINES FOR LAKE COUNTY RESIDENTS

La Pine Community Health Center (LCHC) has been approved to receive and administer the Moderna COVID-19 vaccine. Due to distribution and handling regulations, the La Pine location on Huntington Rd. will be the only site approved for administering the vaccine, so Lake County residents who are established patients of LCHC will need to go to La Pine to receive their vaccine. Residents who are not established patients of LCHC will need to call their primary care provider or the Lake County Health Department for information on when and where they can receive their vaccine.

The timeline of when LCHC can expect to receive a shipment of the vaccine continues to change, but the leadership team at LCHC is working diligently to develop a plan for how to roll out vaccines upon their arrival. This plan will follow the Oregon Health Authority (OHA) guidelines regarding the eligible groups. Initial scheduling discussion suggests that LCHC staff will contact patients directly to schedule an appointment, and those who call LCHC seeking vaccination will be transferred to a voicemail for a return call from a clinical staff member—this will ensure that patients meet vaccination requirements prior to placing them on the schedule.

- It is IMPERATIVE that patients keep their appointments. Appointments will be required to maximize available dosages of each vial opened. Since opened vials cannot be stored, any unused doses must be discarded. Supplies are limited so please support the health center's efforts to vaccinate all patients seeking vaccination by committing to your appointment time.
- If you have questions about efficacy or safety of the vaccine please call 541-536-3435. Leave a voicemail and a member from the clinical team will return your call to answer questions about safety, efficacy, and risk factors in vaccination.
- Vaccination is only one piece of the battle. Once you are vaccinated, it is still recommended that you continue to follow CDC guidelines which include wearing masks and maintaining physical distance in public places and gatherings and washing or sanitizing your hands regularly. Also remember to stay home if you are ill or suspect you have been exposed to someone confirmed to have COVID-19.
- Check the La Pine Community Health Center Facebook page or website for updates on vaccine availability. Notices will be posted when vaccines arrive and will have information about how patients can be screened and scheduled for vaccination.

It has been a difficult, heartbreaking undertaking just getting through the many months of altered and restricted living. We are SO close to better days and you can help by adhering to CDC recommendations, including vaccination.

Throughout North Lake County there is a noticeable amount of increased activity among the Coyote population.

This may well be due to the fact that it is breeding season for Coyotes. Breeding season for Coyotes is in February and March. In the spring, females prepare dens in preparation for their young. Coyotes do not dig their own dens. Instead, they prefer using natural shelters as dens. These can be caves, hollow logs, or even under the dense sagebrush or under bushes and shrubs. Coyotes also use the abandoned dens of other animals, such as badgers and foxes. Females have a gestation period of 63 days and give birth to litters of three to 12 pups at once. The size of the litter depends on where the coyotes live. In areas where there are a lot of coyotes, there will be smaller litters. In areas with fewer coyotes, more pups will be born. The female coyote will stay in her den with her pups until their eyes open. This can take 11 or 12 days. During that time the male will bring food to the female and the pups and help protect them from predators. Afterwards, both the male and female participate in taking care of the pups. Occasionally, female Coyotes will mate with domestic dogs. These hybrids rarely survive because there is no male Coyote willing to step up and help with these litters.

Coyotes are members of the Canidae family and share a lot of the same traits of their relatives: wolves, dogs, foxes and jackals. Coyotes are mostly solitary creatures and mark their territory with urine. They have narrow, elongated snouts, lean bodies, yellow eyes, bushy tails and thick fur. Coyotes are about as big as medium-sized dogs; typically ranging between 20 and 50 pounds. Coyotes' coats may be grey, white, tan or brown, depending upon where they live. Coyotes that live in the mountains have darker coats and those that live in the desert have lighter coats. Their coloring helps them to blend into their surroundings, an advantage in hunting prey or avoiding predators of their own. Bigger predators sometimes feed on the coyote once they invade their territories or compete for food. These predators include cougars, lynxes, bears, alligators, and even eagles.

Coyotes live in North America and roam the plains, forests, mountains and deserts of Canada, the United States, Mexico and Central America. Some even live in tropical climates. As their natural habitats dwindle due to humans, it is not uncommon to find a Coyote scavenging on pet food left out on porches, trash, and even hunting and killing small house pets like small dogs and cats. Coyotes have even been spotted in downtown New York City and in Los Angeles.

Coyotes are predators and scavengers and primarily consume meat. Most of it is from hunting small mammals, such as rabbits and rodents. They will most often hunt at night and will let out a distinct "yip, yip, yip" type howl signaling their location on the hunt. They can also be seen hunting rodents in the North Lake County hay fields during the day. They also clean up carcasses of dead animals. They are known to go after larger prey as well, and will team up in packs to take down deer and other large prey. Coyotes, however, are omnivores and are also known to eat grass in the spring, and fruits when available. The coyote diet also consists of birds, fish, and even reptiles.

Coyotes are typically unwelcome in rural farming and ranching areas as they prey on livestock, costing the owners money and property. Livestock guardian dogs are usually enough to keep coyotes away from livestock, but they don't always succeed. For this reason, government agents regularly hunt coyotes to control their population. Private individuals also put bounties on coyotes that successfully prey on livestock. In 2017 alone, hunters in Utah killed 11,000 coyotes to collect over $500,000 worth of bounties. There are special permits to hunt Coyotes in Oregon.

Karaya Tree - Sterculia wens Roxb.

Sterculia Family

Every Spring Indian harvesters enter forests on the tablelands of the subtropical Himalayas in search of the soft-wooded trees called Karaya, which stand up to 30 feet high. It is April, and the monsoon rains will come in June. In this time, the workers selectively wound some of the larger trees, cutting away two sheets of the smooth, glossy, grayish-white bark, each about 1 foot square, from opposite sides of the trunk. Avoiding the large leaves, which resemble grapevine leaves except the stalks are armed with stinging hairs, making the cuts at a slant, so rainwater will not collect in the wounds. The pieces peel off as easily as birch bark, and a gummy brownish, vinegary-smelling sap begins to flow. It solidifies into ropy strips or into huge tears, which sometimes weigh as much as 10 lbs. The wounds bleed heavily for a day or so, then less heavily for several days more, then the workers return periodically to collect the hardened residue.

After the monsoons have come and gone in October, the workers return for another harvest, but choose different trees. A Karaya Tree needs three to five years to recover from its wounds, and no tree should be so wounded more than five times during its lifetime. Various called Karaya gum, sterculia gum, Kadaya, and mucara, the hard sap in a polysaccharide - a complex form of carbohydrate- whose single molecules have been reported to outweigh those of water by more than 500,000 times. When in contact with water, the absorbent granules of the dried gum swell up like sponges to as much as 100 times their original size.

To a physician, it is a "bulk laxative", as in the intestine this swelling triggers peristalsis, the rhythmic, rippling action that pushes food through the digestive system.

Dentists use powdered Karaya gum as a denture adhesive that is resistant both to bacteria and the enzymes of the mouth.

In the food industry, Karaya gum serves as a stabilizer for salad dressings, a binder for meats like bologna, a gummy base for candies, thickener for meringue, ice cream sticks, sherbet, whipped cream, and cheese spreads. Beauticians take advantage of the gum's water-retentive and thickening properties when they use hair gel, setting lotions and skin softening creams into which it has been incorporated. The paper industry uses it as a binder of the fibers of tissue paper, and in the construction industry to bind particles of some composition boards.
