If you purchased "cheap land" in Lake County, and you thought that you could do anything you like on that property without consulting the Lake County planning commission, and without knowing what the zoning of that property allowed, then the answer is 'yes', you did.

Property ownership comes with many rights, however these rights are often superseded by local zoning ordinances and State regulations. Zoning ordinances impose restrictions on how a particular property can be used and establish requirements such as building heights and setbacks, septic requirements, types of buildings, and uses of the property. Some property owners view these ordinances as an infringement upon their constitutional right to personal property, but zoning ordinances ensure that land is developed in a manner that protects the rights of ALL members of a community.

Zoning ordinances establish whether land shall be used for residential, commercial, agricultural or industrial uses. The ordinances also dictate the manner in which the land is developed by restricting the density, building heights, parking, setbacks and other attributes related to development.

Zoning seeks to either limit or encourage growth within the community depending on the aim of local government. Before a property owner is able to build or live on his property, he must meet all of the zoning conditions in order to receive a building permit, unless an exception called a variance is made.

Zoning decisions are not always final. If your local planning commission rules that your proposed plans do not conform to the zoning, you can file an appeal where you can argue your case. You can also apply for a variance, which allows for an exception to an existing zoning law. Another option is to obtain a conditional use permit, which permits you to use the land as you propose as long as you meet special conditions. If local zoning officials continue to rule against you, you can always challenge them in court and hope a judge or jury sees things your way. This is an expensive and time-consuming route to take, but the courts are often the final arbiter as to whether zoning or private owner's rights prevail.

Property ownership also comes with many responsibilities. The negligent actions of an adjacent landowner can infringe upon the rights of their neighbor and can diminish the value of their neighbors property. If this is the case, the neighbor may have a legal case for diminution of value and can pursue the matter in Civil Court, depending upon the severity of the issue.

Lake County also has a Prohibition and Abatement of Nuisance Ordinance (Ordinance No. 116) that also relates to property owned, leased, or occupied in Lake County. This ordinance defines "Nuisance" as meaning "any act, event or condition that works or causes injury, damage, inconvenience, annoyance, or discomfort to another and the legitimate enjoyment of a person's reasonable rights of person or property, or is capable of causing an unreasonable threat to the public health, safety, and welfare under the circumstances". Number one on the list of issues addressed for abatement and enforcement is "the depositing or accumulation upon property of any junk, trash, garbage, vegetative debris, human or animal waste, vehicles, vehicle parts, or any other material which substantially detracts from the cleanliness of the area,

Christmas Valley Water District in Crisis

The Christmas Valley Water District is struggling to keep afloat. The water system for the township was originally installed by the Penn Phillips development company in the early 1960's. Some of the residents that were here at that time report that the water system was made up of used steamship pipes. These original pipes are disintegrating faster than the water district personnel are able to repair them.

The Water District is in the process of applying for a State funded Block Grant to hopefully receive funds to update part of the distribution system, but they are not optimistic about receiving these funds.

At a special Water District Board meeting on Wednesday, July 28th, the Board voted unanimously to pursue a $1.6M grant/loan through Business Oregon, $500,000 would be in the form of grant funding, the remainder in loan. This will mean more indebtedness for the water district. This grant/loan will allow for the updating of three to five miles of the 31 miles of water district water lines and will result in a rate increase to the water district customers towards the middle of 2022. Already, the water district customers are facing an operations rate increase very soon.

In the past, Lakeview had been seeking funds for a water treatment system for the bad taste and color in their water caused by the naturally occurring iron and manganese in the areas wells. The bad taste did not pose a health hazard for their customers. They received those funds this year through a special State grant.

The Lake County Examiner reported - "When [Gov. Kate] Brown announced that she would not be closing the Warner Creek Correctional Facility (WCCF) she said she would work to secure funding for a $15 million grant to fund the project. She mentioned that the community should have clean drinking water." This brings tears to Erica Anderson's, the Manager of Christmas Valley Water District, eyes when she says, "They are funded for bad tasting and colored water, we can't even consistently distribute our water to our customers due to faulty infrastructure and we can't get grant funding?! We have to go into more debt?!" Erica is very passionate about Christmas Valley Water District, and perhaps this would not be such a bitter pill to swallow had there not been a mistake made when the grant funds announcement was made and everyone, the Commissioner's included, thought that Christmas Valley was receiving grant funds for their water district. However, the fact was that the funds were solely awarded to Lakeview.

Meanwhile, Erica and the rest of the Christmas Valley Water District staff will persevere as they always have and they will continue to work hard for their customers. Please be kind and bear with them.

creates a stench or fire or safety hazard which would be likely to injure any person including children". For a full copy of this ordinance and, if needed, to file a bona fide nuisance complaint visit Lake County's website.

Recently the County Commissioners were taken on a tour of Christmas Valley and the surrounding areas in North Lake County to see the need for enforcing the zoning regulations and the nuisance ordinance. They were appalled at several things they witnessed in the area. At the July 7th Lake County Commissioner's meeting held in Christmas Valley the Commissioner's vowed to begin a campaign of enforcement by hiring a Lake County Code Enforcement Officer this year.

Zoning in the United States began in earnest in New York City with the passage of the 1916 zoning resolution. The resolution established height and setback requirements for buildings in the city. It was a direct response to the construction of the Equity Building, which cast a seven-acre shadow over neighboring property that lowered property values. As zoning ordinances spread across the United States, they were challenged by those who felt that the ordinances were a violation of their individual rights to do what they wanted with their own property. Eventually the issue was addressed by the Supreme Court in the 1926 decision of Village of Euclid v. Ambler Realty Co. The court ruled that zoning regulations were a legitimate use of government authority.

Oregon's statewide land use planning program was created in 1973 to conserve farm land, forest land, coastal resources, and other important natural resources; to encourage efficient development; to coordinate the planning activities of local governments and state and federal agencies; to enhance the state's economy; and to reduce the public costs that result from poorly planned development. In 1973 the Legislative Assembly passed the Oregon Land Use Act (Senate Bill 100), under that program all cities and counties adopted comprehensive plans that meet mandatory state standards. The standards are 19 statewide planning goals that deal with land use, development, housing, transportation, and conservation of natural resources. The passage of Measure 37 in November 2004 showed the potential for profound changes in the implementation of land use laws. The Legislative Assembly subsequently fashioned a compromise bill, which was passed by the voters in 2007 as Measure 49.

When cities, counties and states fail to enforce their own land use zoning ordinances the cost is borne by the public by way of their property tax dollars. It is much more costly for the County to remediate a bad land use situation, than it is to curtail it before it becomes a costly "nuisance".

Lake County is fortunate that the Lake County Commissioner's see the value in enforcing the zoning regulations and the nuisance ordinance.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Several of the properties in the Christmas Valley township have utility easements for the Christmas Valley Water District.

When you have a utility easement on your property, the utility company/Water District may have a range of legal rights.

A few restrictions you might face include:

- Utility company/Water District may restrict your use of the easement when your use can harm underground water mains, valves, water meters, and the like.
- Restrictions on physical alterations: You may want to make an improvement to a certain section of your property. But the utility easement may prevent certain upgrades, such as erecting a fence or a gate.
- Vegetation restrictions: The utility company may require regular access to a particular area and constantly tear up your garden. Additionally, many utility easements limit the planting of major trees in a specified area.

If you're considering purchasing a property with a utility easement, take some time to research the local laws and regulations.

If you have questions regarding your utility easement call:

'It Looked Like an Atomic Bomb':
Surveying the Bootleg Fire's Devastation For one couple, Oregon's Bootleg Fire all but erased their home, leaving little except memories and a tan chimney spire.

By Sergio Olmos, New York Times

Aug. 1, 2021, 5:00 a.m. ET

BEATTY, Ore. — Marc Valens washed his hands in the rubble of what was once his home, in the bowl where he used to make salad. There was something almost normal about it all: the clink and clank of lids and pots as he stood at the still-intact sink and stove.

But any sense of normalcy was an illusion. Much of his home and belongings were gone, swallowed up by the largest wildfire currently burning in America, the Bootleg Fire in southern Oregon.

The frame of a chair sat amid the ash where the living room used to be. Except for the tall spire of the tan-rock chimney, the outdoor sink and stove and a few other things, there was little else. The rest was rubble and ash — even the aluminum rims of his car melted, leaving a silver puddle in the dirt. "It looked like an atomic bomb," said Mr. Valens, 72.

The Bootleg Fire has consumed a wide swath of southern Oregon forest — 413,000 acres, an area the size of Portland, Seattle, Sacramento and New York City combined. It has burned since July 6 and remains only 53 percent contained. The fire, the third-largest blaze in Oregon since 1900, has mostly burned in a remote, sparsely populated area in and near the Fremont-Winema National Forest. Only 161 homes have been destroyed, a low number for a wildfire that immense.

But for Mr. Valens and others who have lost their homes, destruction is destruction, regardless of the

On a recent afternoon, Mr. Valens walked slowly with his hands clasped behind his back, assessing what remained with his wife, Anne Golden. He kicked aside some of the wreckage on a charred sled.

"I think it's still usable," he said.

Mr. Valens has been sleeping in a tent near the rubble, returning home as soon as evacuation orders were lifted. The outhouse burned, so a neighbor brought him a new one. His brother brought him a small trailer. scale.

Mr. Valens and Ms. Golden lived in the house at Moondance Ranch for 50 years, a short drive from Beatty, an unincorporated town about 40 miles north of the California state line. They divided their time there and at their second home in the city of Ashland. He is a retired lawyer who spent a lifetime specializing in environmental and Native American cases. She works as a business consultant and serves on the board of a local hospital.

"This is my hippie van," Mr. Valens said as he toured his property, pointing to the burned-out hulk of his 1960s Chevrolet camper van. "When I turned 21, I took a year driving across the West Coast, Canada, down through New England to the Blue Ridge Mountains."

Up close amid the rubble, there was no pattern or logic to what survived and what did not. The picnic table on a patch of grass emerged unharmed, pristinely and surreally spared from the flames. On the fireplace was a small ceramic souvenir — a miniature bus with a demon on top.

"That was a little ceramic I brought back from Mexico on one of my trips," Mr. Valens said. "That little devil survived."

Earlier this summer, punishing heat waves gripped the Pacific Northwest. In Portland, temperatures reached as high as 116 degrees, and a majority of the state has been primed to burn while undergoing severe drought. The past few weeks have felt especially chaotic, as climate change has helped make extreme weather and extreme disaster commonplace in the region.

"West of the Mississippi we have droughts, fires and smoke, and east of the Mississippi there's flooding," Ms. Golden said. "It's biblical. It just feels like the plague and everything else."

In the aftermath of the fire, Mr. Valens and Ms. Golden are uncertain whether they and others who lost their homes will receive any state or federal aid. In a meeting with President Biden and a group of governors on Friday, Gov. Kate Brown of Oregon asked the president for flexibility in using federal disaster-relief money in sparsely populated areas, which are currently ineligible for Federal Emergency Management Agency funding, a spokesman said.

Mr. Valens said fire insurance had been difficult to obtain for him and other homeowners in the area. "We couldn't get nearly as much insurance as we wanted," he said, adding that he was able to insure only about 20 percent of his ranch months before the fire.

In 2019, Mr. Valens was diagnosed with a rare form of prostate cancer. As he toured the wreckage, he paused to sit down several times, the cocktail of drugs helping to keep the cancer in remission making him tired at times. He was quiet and contemplative. "The lesson I learned with cancer is that it's a waste of time worrying about what you should have done," he said. "And that's where we are with the fire. What do we have now? What resources are left?"

BACK IN THYME

IN MY OPINION

By: Linda McCoslin

Have you ever heard the saying "Loose Lips Sink Ships"? I am rather upset with those who post derogatory remarks on the various Christmas Valley facebook pages about Deena Johnson's running of the Flea Market in front of the Sand City Lodge. You need to get a life! It has been said that she is hurting the Lodge and other businesses. This is not true! She promotes all local establishments, she has increased the income at the Lodge, both for the restaurant and the bar. Deena has plans to make the Flea Market a fun place for kids, as well, by making a fun area for kids to play.

It was Deena's idea to bring in live bands and a beer garden to the Lodge. Inspired by this idea, Roxane and Dan, who manage the bar at the Lodge, brought in Phil, the Karaoke Man, and his wife to liven up the place. They are amazing people! Their fun, bouncy personalities make people want to participate and get up and sing. Recently, I was there on a Saturday night and the place was packed. A local girl, Stephanie, was singing when I arrived and I was impressed by how well she sang. The biggest surprise though, was when Dusty Stirton sang a couple of songs. Wow! What a beautiful voice he has. Two more local guys sang and people were dancing. Donovan Krager sang with his little two year old daughter, Zinne, in his arms. Such a heartwarming sight as she so lovingly watched her daddy sing to her and to watch them dance together throughout the evening. Zinne was fascinated by Becky Womack's dancing and watched Becky's fancy footwork so intently. Mike Stettler recited the Declaration of Independence to music, and everyone loved it! That is what I call a fun filled evening!

Deena also helps Dorothy, who manages the Lodge, by doing dishes and cleaning up when she can. She is dedicated to help Dorothy with whatever is needed to build the Lodge back up to being as busy as it used to be.

The Flea Market needs more vendors. Several vendors backed out due to the negative facebook comments that were made by people who did not have the facts. Shame on them for trying to ruin a good thing for our small community!

It would be great if our non profits, our church groups, 4-H groups, and local crafters felt comfortable having a booth at the Flea Market. There is no cost for non profits and kids groups!

So come on people, join the fun! Our community needs to come back to life after all that has been going on with the pandemic and all.

Please come join the fun!
Everyone is welcome!

Love to all,
~Linda
