Where were you on Tuesday, September 11, 2001?

by: Karen Morgan

I remember clearly where I was on that day. I was at home on our farm in Williams, Oregon, far away from what was happening in New York and Washington, D.C. I got a phone call from a friend who was in hysterics telling me to turn on my television. The minute I turned on the television I saw a replay of a plane crashing into the World Trade Center. Not knowing what was happening, I thought that it was an accident, but then there was live footage of another plane heading towards and crashing into the World Trade Center. Although I could not wrap my mind around what was happening, I knew that this was NO accident.

There was devastation and chaos throughout the day. All television stations were consumed with it. Later, we all would learn that the first plane, American Airlines Flight 11 had been taken over by Mohammed Atta and he with the other hijackers aboard intentionally crashed the plane into floors 93-99 of the North Tower of the World Trade Center, killing everyone on board and hundreds inside the building.

The second plane was United Airlines Flight 175 that other Hijackers used to crash into floors 75-85 of the World Trade Center's South Tower, killing everyone on board and hundreds inside the building.

The third plane, Hijackers aboard Flight 77 crashed into the western façade of the Pentagon in Washington, D.C., killing 59 aboard the plane and 125 military and civilian personnel inside the building.

The media reported that al Qaeda terrorists aboard three hijacked passenger planes carried out coordinated suicide attacks against the World Trade Center in New York City and the Pentagon in Washington, D.C., killing 265 on board the planes and nearly 3,000 people on the ground.

A fourth plane crashed into a field near Shanksville, Pennsylvania, killing all on board, after passengers and crew attempted to wrest control from the hijackers. The heroism of the passengers and crew saved many lives that day.

Later that evening, President Bush addressed the nation, calling the attacks "evil, despicable acts of terror" and declaring that America, its friends and allies would "stand together to win the war against terrorism."

On that day, our family was preparing to celebrate the the 19th birthday of my eldest son who would be leaving us soon for Marine boot camp. He had enlisted in the Marines right after his high school graduation in June of that year. During his valedictorian speech to his graduating class he announced that he planned to enlist in the Marines. I remember thinking to myself that it was a good time for him to be a Marine as we were not at war with anyone. Suddenly, now we were at war – a war on terrorism! The events on this day would change many lives and America forever.

The irony of my son's story is that I gave birth to him in a foreign country where his father was from. It is predominantly an Islamic country, and our cultures clashed. When I chose to return home my son was only 18 months old. When I left I was not allowed to take my child with me. My father-in-law was a high ranking government official in that country and due to political reasons my own country was not able to help me to get him back. I was told by a State Department representative that they did not want to make an international incident of a child.

During my son's early childhood I was allowed to visit him on a couple of occasions with strict supervision and with strict rules; I was not to speak to anyone in the media and I was not allowed to tell my son that I was his mother.

When my son turned 16 my former husband decided that he could come to the United States and live with me for his education. When he went to the United States Embassy to get his student visa, he was told that he did not need a student visa because he was an American citizen due to the fact that he had been born of an American mother. From that point on he embraced his American heritage.

2001 was a whirlwind of events for my son; high school graduation, enlisting in the Marines, the events of 9/11, and heading to boot camp at Camp Pendleton. Then in 2002, right out of boot camp my son's 3rd Battalion/4th Marines, nicknamed the "Thundering Third", were deployed to Iraq during "Iraqi Freedom". There were journalists "embedded" with the troops during the Iraqi Freedom campaign to record and report everything. For any parent or family member of a service member in Iraq it was pure hell knowing that every second of every day you could catch a glimpse of what was happening and you would find yourself losing time watching and hoping that your loved one was okay and would not become a casualty of this war on terror.

Around the time of the 9/11 anniversary in 2004, I received a phone call from a government official telling me that I needed to get to the trauma center in Las Vegas, Nevada, that something had happened to my son. I asked her if he was wounded or was he dead. She said that she did not have the authority to tell me; I just needed to get there as soon as possible. Gripped by fear of the unknown my mind drowning in every emotion associated with loss, I became incapable of dialing the phone in order to make flight arrangements and nothing that came out of my mouth made any sense at all. My mother and my husband had to make the flight arrangements and my husband had to physically help me onto the plane to get to Las Vegas. Once we arrived at the trauma center, I was ushered to the ICU where my son lay broken and attached to wires and tubes. The doctor was there, and my son's commanding officer was there with one of his aide's. The doctor informed us that my son had a T11/T12 complete spinal-cord injury.

He and his buddy's had been on leave in Las Vegas and he was hurrying back from Las Vegas to the base in Twenty Nine Palms for his third deployment to Iraq. He was alone, driving a friend's lifted jeep wrangler and lost control of it when he somehow drifted onto the shoulder of the highway resulting in a single vehicle accident. The jeep was open topped with a roll bar and he was thrown from it as it rolled several times.

He was an infantry rifleman with the ambition and aptitude to train to become a sniper, now his military career was over, but by the grace of God he was alive.

In the weeks that followed he was transferred to the San Diego VA hospital where he spent several months in rehab and training to live an independent life in a wheelchair. It was in San Diego that we met the representatives of the Paralyzed Veterans of America (PVA). They helped us navigate the endless government paperwork, they encouraged my son to participate in outings for socialization, and they encouraged him to pursue wheelchair sports. My son's Marine discipline, his tenacious attitude, and the mentorship of the PVA representatives got him through it all. He is now able to live and work independently; he can ski, scuba dive, and he travels all over the world. He has competed with the Miami Heat Professional Wheelchair Basketball team, and competes in para-cycling events.

Currently, he trains twice a day 5 to 6 days a week to compete in para-cycling events and in preparation to qualify for the 2024 Paralympic Games in Paris – the 20th anniversary of his spinal-cord injury.

In the years that followed his accident, he got married, he graduated Magna Cum Laude from the University of Miami with a degree in Economics, his wife gave birth to their son, he started his own real estate business in Miami, and he is on the Board of the National PVA and on the Board of the Florida PVA. He routinely advocates in Washington, D.C. and around the country on behalf of all veterans and advocates for the rights of paralyzed veterans, and fundraising to find a cure for paralysis for all people afflicted with paralysis.

In one of his recent posts on Instagram to honor our service members he wrote:

"Some have fallen in foreign lands, some from tragedy and from what traumas they have brought back from the horrors of war.

You are all heroes and patriots in my eyes, and when the reaper comes for me I will meet you at the gates of heaven and relieve you of your post.

Semper Fi brothers!"

There are so many more stories of how that Tuesday in September 2001 impacted and changed lives, changed destinies, and changed America forever. As we look back on this 20th anniversary of 9/11 may we never forget the fallen, the heroes of that day, the heroes that went to war on terrorism and the heart ache and sacrifices of the families and loved ones of all of them!

When Did The Paralympics Start? Here's A Brief History Of The Games

August 25, 2021 6:30 AM ET

RACHEL TREISMAN

Sports for athletes with an impairment have existed for more than a century, the International Paralympic Committee points out.

But it wasn't until after World War II that the official Paralympics began to take shape, out of an effort to help the many veterans and civilians who were injured during that time.

German-British neurologist Dr. Ludwig Guttmann (who actually escaped from the Nazis) opened a spinal injuries center at the Stoke Mandeville Hospital in 1944 at the request of the British government.

At that time in the U.K., "you were left in hospital to die because the assumption was that you wouldn't have anything to contribute back to society so you might as well be allowed to slip away," Baroness Tanni Grey Thompson, one of Britain's most successful Paralympians, told NPR in 2012. Guttmann challenged that notion, she explained.

The activities there grew in both scope and intensity. As the IPC put it, "in time, rehabilitation sport evolved to recreational sport and then to competitive sport."

Four years later, as the 1948 Olympic Games kicked off in London, Guttmann organized an archery competition for wheelchair athletes. The Stoke Mandeville Games went international four years later when Dutch ex-servicemen joined in. They became the Paralympic Games in Rome in 1960, and have been held every four years ever since.

The Paralympic and Olympic games have taken place in the same host cities and venue since the Summer Games of 1988 and the Winter Games of 1992, thanks to an agreement between the IPC and the International Olympic Committee.

It's also quite literally in the event's name. The word "Paralympic" comes from the Greek preposition "para" (beside) and the word "Olympic," meaning that the two games exist side-by-side.

France's Claude Issorat celebrates winning the 1500m wheelchair race at the summer Paralympic Games on Aug. 2, 1992, in Barcelona.

HAPPY ANNIVERSARY

Christmas Valley residents, Lee and Millie Shelton, celebrate 65 years of marriage.

Mr. & Mrs. Shelton met at church and eloped to Reno, Nevada where they took their marriage vows on September 21, 1956.

On their 50th wedding anniversary they renewed their vows in front of family and friends.

The Sheltons have called Christmas Valley home for 20 years. They have three beloved children; daughters, Peggy and Sherry, reside with them here in Christmas Valley, and their son, Robert, resides in Arizona.

They are also blessed to have two granddaughters and many great grandchildren.

The power of human connections®

Midstate Electric Cooperative is proposing to increase the height of a radio tower at the Millican Substation from 40 to 60 feet above ground level. Millican Substation is one mile East of Christmas Valley on Millican Road. The tower has FCC ASR registration number 1295995. The FAA has found no obstruction issues with the tower extension in its study 201-ANM-3954-OE issued 7/1/2021.

Concerns regarding this proposal may be filed with the ASR filing system at WWW.FCC.GOV.

MEMORIAL MESSAGE

Thank you, Ken Wolfe, for being there for my daughter and grandson. You helped my daughter grow into a beautiful woman and great mother, and my grandson grow into an amazing young man. Saturday, we gathered together for a memorial for you, a way of showing our appreciation for the way you helped so many others. A small gathering of family and friends. Thank you for being there for my family when I could not be, thank you again, Mom, Monica Bass.

Don't forget the pets!

PATTON MEADOW FIRE

Lakeview, OR- The Patton Meadow Fire of the Fox Complex remained at 8,930 acres on August 26th with containment growing to 90%.

A local Type 4 team assumed management of the fire, they are to complete any remaining mop up, patrol the perimeter of the fire, bring back any remaining, unnecessary equipment, and continue suppression repair work.

Crews will continue mop up operations extinguishing any hot spots they discover 200 feet deep into the interior.

As the firefighting effort winds down, most crews will be demobilizing and heading home or onto other fire assignments. There will be some crews and equipment remaining to help manage the fire going forward.

As the work continues, and the season continues, the public may see smoke from the interior of the fire. This is normal and does not pose any threat to the public.

BACK IN THYME

Submitted By: Linda McCoslin

Cumin: For the Body

Cumin contains a surprising amount of manganese, magnesium, calcium, copper, zinc, potassium, and phosphorus, as well as vitamins A, C, E, K, and B vitamins. One teaspoon of ground cumin contains 1.4 mg. of iron (17.5 percent of the RDI for adults), and is sometimes used to help treat iron deficiency anemia.

Antimicrobial, antiseptic, and antiviral due to its carvacol and thymol constituents, cumin protects the respiratory tract, while its anti-inflammatory, broncho-dilating action soothes and calms symptoms of cold, flu, and allergies. A 2015 study published in "Biomedical and Pharmacology Journal" discovered cumin contains EHP, a broad-spectrum antimicrobial, antiviral agent that was surprisingly effective against a myriad of viruses, including hepatitis A and HSV-1, as well as, fungi like ringworm and athlete's foot.

However, cumin is best known for its powerful carminative effect on the digestive system, stimulating gut enzymes and increasing bile while facilitating digestion and assimilation. Its antispasmodic, anti-inflammatory, antioxidant organic compound cumin aldehyde calms cramping and digestive discomfort, making it a favorable spice for those with IBD/IBS. Cumin's chemical compound megalomicin, and antibacterial and antifungal property released during the digestive process, helps guard against gut infections and supports healthy micro organisms.

Cumin is safe for most people, but pregnant or nursing women should avoid large therapeutic doses. Those with diabetes or with gastric or blood clotting disorders should consult a physician before using Cumin.

Cooking with Cumin

Jamaican Curry Powder

An authentic Jamaican curry powder without hot pepper, which should be added separately to any dish. You can also use powdered versions of any of the ingredients, but for better flavor use whole seed. For authentic Jamaican flavor, you will usually add Scotch Bonnet or Habanero peppers to your recipes.

Ingredients:

- ¼ cup whole coriander seeds
- 2 tablespoons whole cumin seeds
- 2 tablespoons whole mustard seeds
- 2 tablespoons whole anise seeds
- 1 tablespoon whole fenugreek seeds
- 1 tablespoon whole allspice berries
- 5 tablespoons ground turmeric

Combine the coriander seeds, cumin seeds, mustard seeds, anise seeds, fenugreek seeds, and allspice berries in a skillet. Toast over medium heat until the color of the spices slightly darkens, and the spices are very fragrant, about 10 minutes. Remove the spices from the skillet, and allow to cool to room temperature. Grind the spices with the turmeric in a spice grinder. Store in an airtight container at room temperature.
