Peggy Paulette (Puckett) Shumway

Born: May 25, 1945, Prineville, Oregon

Entered Into Rest: February 28, 2024, Bend, Oregon

Peggy was born to Bonnie and Anne "Teen" Puckett on May 25, 1945 in Prineville, Oregon as one of eight children. She graduated from Crook County High School, and married Carl Shumway that same year in 1963. She and Carl went on to have three sons and have been married for 60 years.

Peggy worked at Coin Millworks in Prineville, she managed Carl's Paint & Plywood Retail store for four years, she worked at Joyce's Dress shop, and managed the Christmas Valley Lodge Restaurant and Lounge for four and a half years. She enjoyed baking, cooking, gardening, and kept busy with various other hobbies and interests.

Family meant everything to Peggy, and family always came first. Her sons and grandchildren were her world. She was always baking cookies, pies and cakes for them and giving them little gifts she had picked up here and there for them that she always wrapped with multi-colored bows.

5 Things You May Not Know About Leap Day

The extra day tacked on to every fourth year is a subtle admission that even something as regular and simple as a calendar can be more complicated than we think.

BY: STEPHEN WOOD

Nearly every four years, we add an extra day to the calendar in the form of February 29, also known as Leap Day. Put simply, these additional 24 hours are built into the calendar to ensure that it stays in line with the Earth's movement around the sun.

While the modern calendar contains 365 days, the actual time it takes for Earth to orbit its star is slightly longer—roughly 365.2421 days. The difference might seem negligible, but over decades and centuries that missing quarter of a day per year can add up. To ensure consistency with the true astronomical year, it is necessary to periodically add in an extra day to make up the lost time and get the calendar back in synch with the heavens.

1. Many ancient calendars had entire leap months

Many calendars, including the Hebrew, Chinese and Buddhist calendars, are lunisolar, meaning their dates indicate the position of the moon as well as the position of Earth relative to the sun. Since there is a natural gap of roughly 11 days between a year as measured by lunar cycles and one measured by the Earth's orbit, such calendars periodically require the addition of extra months, known as intercalary or interstitial months, to keep them on track.

Intercalary months, however, were not necessarily regular. Historians are still unclear as to how the early Romans kept track of their years, mostly because the Romans themselves may not have been entirely sure. It appears that the early Roman calendar consisted of ten months plus an ill-defined winter period, the varying length of which caused the calendar to become unpegged from the solar year.

Eventually, this uncertain stretch of time was replaced by the new months of January and February, but the situation remained complicated. They employed a 23-day intercalary month known as Mercedonius to account for the difference between their year and the solar year, inserting it not between months but within the month of February for reasons that may have been related to lunar cycles.

To make matters even more confusing, the decision of when to hold Mercedonius often fell to the consuls, who used their ability to shorten or extend the year to their own political ends. As a result, by the time of Julius Caesar, the Roman year and the solar year were thoroughly out of sync.

2. Julius Caesar introduced Leap Day, with help from the Egyptians...

The Mercedonius-when-we-feel-like-it system apparently irked

Caesar, the general-turned-consul-turned-dictator of Rome who drastically altered the course of European history. In addition to conquering Gaul and transforming Rome from a republic into an empire, Caesar re-ordered the Roman calendar, giving us the blueprint off of which much of the world still operates to this day.

During his time in Egypt, Caesar became convinced of the superiority of the Egyptian solar calendar, which featured 365 days and an occasional intercalary month which was inserted when astronomers observed the correct conditions in the stars. Caesar and the philosopher Sosigenes of Alexandria made one important modification: instead of relying on the stars, they would simply add a day to every fourth year. In keeping with the Roman tradition of messing with the length of February, that day would fall in the second month of the year—thus Leap Day was born. Caesar added two extra-long months to the year 46 B.C.E. to make up for missed intercalations, and the Julian Calendar took effect on January 1st, 45 B.C.E.

3. ...but their math was a little off

By the 16th century, scholars had noticed that time was still slipping—Caesar's calculation that a year lasted 365.25 days was close, but still overestimated the solar year by 11 minutes. This was a problem for the Catholic Church, as the date of Easter had drifted away from its traditional place, the first Sunday after the first full moon following the vernal equinox, by roughly ten days. Pope Gregory XIII commissioned a modified calendar, one which kept Leap Day but accounted for the inaccuracy by eliminating it on centurial years not divisible by 400 (1700, 1800, and 1900 were not leap years, but 2000 was). The introduction of the Gregorian Calendar marked the last change to the Western calendar as we know it today.

Experts note that the Gregorian calculation of a solar year—365.2425 days—is still not perfect, and thus another correction will be necessary. Thankfully, the Gregorian calendar is only off by about one day every 3,030 years, so mankind has some time before this becomes a problem.

4. Leap Day is often associated with marriage, proposals and flipping gender roles

Curiously, many Leap Day customs have revolved around romance and marriage. Tradition holds that in 5th-century Ireland, St. Bridget lamented to St. Patrick that women were not allowed to propose marriage to men. So legend has it that St. Patrick designated the only day that does not occur annually, February 29, as a day on which women would be allowed to propose to men. In some places, Leap Day thus became known as Bachelor's Day.

This tradition hopped the Irish Sea to Scotland and England, where the British added a twist—if a man rejected a woman's proposal, he owed her a debt of several pairs of fine gloves, perhaps to hide the fact that she did not have an engagement ring. In Greek tradition, however, it is considered bad luck to marry on Leap Day, and statistics suggest that Greek couples continue to take this superstition seriously.

5. People born on Leap Day are called 'Leaplings'

There are only about 5 million people in the whole world who were born on February 29, with the odds of being born on Leap Day standing at about 1-in-1,461. Several famous people—including actress and singer Dinah Shore (born 1916), motivational speaker Tony Robbins (born 1960) and hip-hop artist Ja Rule (born 1976)—are leaplings. Leaplings technically only get to celebrate their birthdays once every four years, but they do get to be part of an elite group.

These leaplings have left their mark in various fields, from entertainment to politics they include Ja Rule, the hip-hop artist; Prime Minister Pedro Sánchez of Spain; the actor Dennis Farina; Dinah Shore, the actress and television personality; Tony Robbins, the motivational speaker; and Pope Paul III, who was born on Feb. 29, 1468.

Perhaps the most famous fictional character born on a leap day is Superman!

St. Patrick and The Snake Legend

St. Patrick, the patron saint of Ireland, is often associated with the legend of driving snakes out of the Emerald Isle. However, let's unravel the truth behind this intriguing tale.

St. Patrick, believed to have been born around 370 C.E., hailed from Wales or Scotland. As a young man named Maewyn, he was captured and enslaved in Ireland. During his captivity, he had religious visions and dreams.

After escaping, he studied in a French monastery and later returned to Ireland with a mission to spread Christianity. He changed his name to Patricius or Pátraic, meaning "father of the people."

St. Patrick incorporated Irish culture and language into his teachings, rather than eradicating native beliefs.

St. Patrick is famous for supposedly driving snakes out of Ireland. However, here's the twist: there likely never were any snakes on the island.

The serpent in the story is often interpreted as a metaphor for early Irish Pagan faiths. Rather than physically expelling Pagans, St. Patrick facilitated the spread of Christianity throughout Ireland.

His successful conversion efforts paved the way for the decline of old systems and the rise of the new religion.

So, while the snakes may be symbolic, St. Patrick's legacy lies in his role as a Christian missionary, not as a snake wrangler!

PUBLIC NOTICE OF OPEN HOUSE

On Monday, March 11, 2024, the Oregon Department of Land Conservation and Development will be holding an Open House style public information session to visit about identifying opportunities and reducing conflicts in siting Photovoltaic Solar Energy Generation projects. Work on this topic has been directed by the Oregon Legislature through the adoption of HB 3409, which focuses on eastern Oregon.

The information session is scheduled from 5:00-7:00 PM and will occur at the Christmas Valley Booster Building Located at 86962 Aspen Lane, Christmas Valley.

This event is not a hearing and does not contemplate any development project in north Lake County or anywhere else. Instead, it is the first of at least four such meetings to be held at various locations in eastern Oregon. Public feedback will be used to inform policy determinations required of the Land Conservation and Development Commission.

For additional information please feel free to contact Jon Jinings or Adam Tate. Jon can be reached at 541-325-6928 or by email at jon.jinings@dlcd.oregon.gov. Adam can be reached at 971-446-1079 or by email at adam.tate@dlcd.oregon.gov. Additional information is also available on the department's website at www.oregon.gov/lcd/LAR/Pages/eosolar.aspx

Gradatim

by Josiah Gilbert Holland

Heaven is not reached at a single bound;
But we build the ladder by which we rise
From the lowly earth, to the vaulted skies,
And we mount to its summit round by round.

I count this thing to be grandly true:
That a noble deed is a step toward God,
Lifting the soul from the common clod
To a purer air and a broader view.

We rise by the things that are under feet;
By what we have mastered of good and gain;
By the pride deposed and the passion slain,
And the vanquished ills that we hourly meet.

We hope, we aspire, we resolve, we trust,
When the morning calls us to life and light,
But our hearts grow weary, and, ere the night,
Our lives are trailing the sordid dust.

We hope, we resolve, we aspire, we pray,
And we think that we mount the air on wings
Beyond the recall of sensual things,
While our feet still cling to the heavy clay.

Wings for the angels, but feet for men!
We may borrow the wings to find the way—
We may hope, and resolve, and aspire, and pray;
But our feet must rise, or we fall again.

Only in dreams is a ladder thrown
From the weary earth to the sapphire walls;
But the dreams depart, and the vision falls,
And the sleeper wakes on his pillow of stone.

Heaven is not reached at a single bound;
But we build the ladder by which we rise
From the lowly earth, to the vaulted skies,
And we mount to its summit, round by round.
