Honoring 10 Groundbreaking Women Inventors for Women's History Month

Women inventors are behind a wide range of key innovations, from Kevlar to dishwashers to better life rafts.

BY: BECKY LITTLE

Female inventors have played a large role in U.S. history, but haven't always received credit for their work. Besides the fact that their contributions have sometimes been downplayed or overlooked, women—particularly women of color—have historically had fewer resources to apply for U.S. patents and market their inventions.

Not all of the female inventors on this list received attention for their work in their lifetime, or were able to market their inventions. But all of them contributed innovations that helped advance technology in their respective fields.

1. Life Raft: Invented by Maria E. Beasley in 1880

In the early 1880s, when a new wave of European immigrants were sailing to the United States, a Philadelphia inventor named Maria E. Beasley designed an improved life raft. Unlike the flat life rafts of the 1870s, Beasley's raft had guard rails to help keep people inside during emergencies when they had to abandon ship.

Beasley patented her first life raft design in 1880 in both the United States and Great Britain, and received a second U.S. patent for an updated version of the raft in 1882. In addition to the life raft, she also invented a foot warmer, a steam generator and a barrel-hooping machine, receiving a total of 15 U.S. patents and at least two in Great Britain during her life.

2. Fold-Out Bed: Invented by Sarah E. Goode in 1885

In 1885, a Chicago inventor and furniture store owner named Sarah E. Goode received a patent for her "Cabinet-Bed." The new piece of furniture was a desk that folded out into a bed, allowing the user to save space in a tiny apartment.

Goode's invention predated the 20th century's pull-down Murphy beds and pull-out sofas. With her Cabinet-Bed, Goode—who was born into slavery and won her freedom after the Civil War—became one of the first Black women to patent and invention with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office.

3. Dishwasher: Invented by Josephine G. Cochran in 1886

Josephine G. Cochran was a wealthy socialite in Shelbyville, Illinois when she got the idea to invent a dishwasher. Cochran employed servants to perform housework in her mansion, but started washing her fine china herself when she discovered some of the servants had accidentally chipped them. Cochran found her brief exposure to housework unpleasant, and resolved to build a machine that could wash the dishes for her.

The result was the first commercially-successful dishwasher, which Cochran patented in 1886. Previous attempts at dishwashers had used scrubbers, but Cochran's design was more effective because it used water pressure to clean the dishes. With her patent secure, she founded Cochran's Crescent Washing Machine Company. Because the machine was too expensive for most households, Cochran sold most of her dishwashers to hotels and restaurants.

4. Car Heater: Invented by Margaret A. Wilcox in 1893

The first person to patent an automobile heater was Margaret A. Wilcox, an engineer in Chicago. Wilcox's 1893 design used heat from the car's engine to keep drivers and passengers warm during trips. Later engineers improved upon the idea by making the heat easier to regulate.

Wilcox's other inventions included a combined clothes-and-dishwasher, which didn't catch on in the same way.

5. Feeding Tube: Invented by Bessie Virginia Blount in 1948

Bessie Virginia Blount, also known as Bessie Blount Griffin, was an American nurse, physical therapist, inventor, handwriting expert and possibly the first Black woman to train at Scotland Yard's Document Division. In the 1940s, she who worked with World War II veterans in New York City's Bronx Hospital (now part of BronxCare Health System), where she taught veterans with amputations to read and write with their teeth and feet. It was during this work that Bount invented a device that her patients could use to feed themselves.

Blount's invention involved a tube that delivered food to a person's mouth whenever he or she bit down on it. She patented part of the design in 1948, then gifted the rights to the invention over to the French government in 1951 on the advice of a religious leader (the U.S. government hadn't shown much interest in the device).

Her invention paved the way for modern feeding tubes, which can be inserted into a person's nose or stomach if the user can't ingest food orally. After patenting the feeding tube, Blount continued to invent and went on to become a forensic handwriting analyst.

6. Kevlar: Invented by Stephanie L. Kwolek in 1966

Stephanie L. Kwolek was a chemist who created synthetic fibers while working at DuPont's Pioneering Research Laboratory in Wilmington, Delaware. The most famous one she created was Kevlar—a strong, lightweight and heat-resistant synthetic fiber.

Kwolek patented the process for making Kevlar in 1966. Kevlar is used in bulletproof vests and other protective equipment, and has also become a substitute for asbestos since the 1970s, when companies began to scale back on using the cancer-causing material.

7. Home Security System: Invented by Marie Van Brittan Brown in 1969

Marie Van Brittan Brown was a Black nurse and inventor in New York City who, together with her husband, Albert Brown, patented the first home security system in 1969. Brown got the idea for the security system because she and her husband worked long hours as an electronics technician, and she often found herself coming home to their apartment and being by herself late at night.

The system that Brown invented involved a sliding camera that could capture images through four different peepholes in her door, TV monitors to display the camera images and two-way microphones that allowed her to talk with anyone outside her door. There was also a remote to unlock the door from a distance and a button to alert police or security. This system paved the way for modern security systems, and has been cited in at least 32 patent applications that came after it.

8. Cataract Treatment: Invented by Patricia E. Bath in 1988

Patricia E. Bath was the first Black American to complete a residency in ophthalmology and the first Black female doctor to patent a medical device in the United States. The device she invented was the Laserphaco Probe, which removed cataracts—cloudy blemishes in the eye that can lead to vision loss.

Bath's new ways of removing cataracts was faster, more accurate and less invasive than previous methods. She earned her first U.S. patent related to the procedure in 1988, and received four other U.S. patents related to her cataract-removal innovations during her lifetime, in addition to patents in Japan, Canada and Europe. She passed away at the age of 76.

9. Stem Cell Isolation: Invented by Ann Tsukamoto in 1991

While working in Palo Alto in 1991, Asian American scientist Ann Tsukamoto was part of the team that patented the first method of isolating blood-forming stem cells in 1991. Tsukamoto holds a total of 12 U.S. patents for her stem cell research, which has helped with the development of cancer treatments.

10. Frequency Hopping: Developed by Hedy Lamarr 1940

Hedy Lamarr was a Hollywood actress and inventor from Vienna, Austria, who developed frequency hopping—the technology behind WiFi, Bluetooth, and GPS. Until recently, her legacy was nothing short of shallow. She was just one of the many beautiful actresses who graced the screen during the Golden Age of Hollywood. Yet, in reality, historians should write Lamarr into history books as one of the most influential figures in the field of modern technology.

BLM Lakeview Field Office Hires Three New Employees

LAKEVIEW, Ore. — The Bureau of Land Management's Lakeview Field Office has hired three new employees: Katherine Gendron, Oliver Liu and Lindsey Smith.

Katherine Gendron knew she wanted to be an archaeologist at an early age. Katie worked at Disney's California Adventure to pay her way through undergraduate and graduate school while interning at several museums under paleontological and Geographic Information System archaeological curators studying invertebrate paleontology and Southwest Archaeology and GIS. In 2019, Katie began intermittently working as an archaeological technician for cultural resource management firms throughout southern California. In 2020, she started her master's program at the University of Denver, focusing on GIS and archaeology. Katie is the first in her family to graduate from two undergraduate and graduate programs. In 2022, she transitioned to working in the non-profit sector as a GIS analyst while finalizing her thesis on a spatial analytic approach to understanding various ceramic styles of the southwest region. After two-plus years, Katie found her way back to archaeology and began her journey with BLM in January 2024!

Oliver Liu is a Natural Resource Specialist for weeds in the Lakeview Field Office. Oliver is from the perpetually cold and snowy lands of Northern Minnesota. He started his career in natural resources as a biotech in plants during undergrad with the National Park Service. Before starting with BLM, Oliver served as a natural resources/development specialist, Gitchi-Gami State Trail and public water access development on Lake Superior. Oliver has also worked in EMS/rescue, enforcement and emergency management. He enjoys hiking, backpacking, cross-country skiing, and paddleboarding in his off time.

Lindsey Smith has always loved animals and was convinced she wanted to be an animal control officer (thanks to Animal Planet). In college, Lindsey saw photos of people handling wildlife and changed her and hasn't looked back. Lindsey ran the seasonal circuit, taking jobs with the Forest Service, University of Nevada-Reno, Great Basin Institute, California Department of Fish and Wildlife, and Brookhaven National Laboratory. Lindsey found that the Great Basin always called to her. After working in North Dakota for almost four years at the National Ecological Observatory, Lindsey knew she had to return to the sagebrush-steppe ecosystem. She was lucky to obtain a Natural Resource Specialist position with BLM in Lakeview, Oregon. She loves to camp, hike, and explore new scenery when it's warm. She enjoys reading, board games, and puzzles when it's cold.

"I am very excited about all three of my new hires! Katie, Oliver and Lindsey all showed up ready to work and are very productive employees," said Assistant Field Manager Grace Haskins. "We have a big workload with all of our BIL and IRA at the Lakeview Field Office, and these three were exactly what we needed to help us accomplish the work."

Love Overcame

Emerging from a cold tomb

All the truth, majesty and creativity of a living God

Transforming a broken heart

Making a quiet return, in a still and sorrowful garden

The grave stone rolled away, to release redemptive love

Jesus resurrected and restored

Comforts a weeping woman

Speaks with travelers on a journey

Meets with his faithful friends

And they bow down before Christ alive

*And acknowledged that the savior
has arrived*

That the word of God has come alive

And that the extraordinary transformation of heaven and earth is complete.

March

A Spike of Green

When I went out
The sun was hot
It shone upon
My flower pot.
And there I saw
A spike of green
That no one else
Had ever seen!
On other days
The things I see
Are mostly old
Except for me.
But this green spike
So new and small
Had never yet
Been seen at all!
Barbara Baker

from All Day Long
compiled by Pamela Whitlock

Spring is coming, Spring is coming
Birdies build your nest.
Weave together straw and feather
Each one doing their best.

Spring is coming, Spring is coming
Flowers are coming, too.
Pansies, lilies, daffodilies
Now are pushing through.

Spring is coming, Spring is coming
All around is fair.
Shimmer, glimmer on the meadow,
Joy is everywhere.
