Together on the Trail: Community Voices Guide Lake County's Future

Community Members Help Shape the County's Future

If you've been wondering what's been happening with Lake County's big community and economic development planning effort led by nonprofit, Community Solutions Innovators (CSI) — the answer is: a lot!

The Lake County Community & Economic Development Strategic Planning Project is in its last week of Phase 3 Working Groups, and the energy couldn't be higher. These groups — made up of local residents, business owners, educators, and civic leaders — rolled up their sleeves to help define the priorities that will guide Lake County's next decade of resilience.

The groups focused on eight key areas that touch nearly every part of community life: public safety, business and workforce development, parks and recreation, tourism and destination management, civic engagement, infrastructure, water, and wastewater systems.

"People are showing up because they care deeply about the future of Lake County," said Mark Smith, CSI's co-founder and Project Manager. "We're seeing so many great ideas — from improving local job opportunities to connecting neighborhoods through safe recreation routes."

The working groups were designed to be hands-on and inclusive, meeting weekly for six weeks both online and in person around the county. Discussions have been lively, full of creative problem-solving and collaboration between folks who don't always find themselves at the same table.

One participant summed it up this way: "It feels good to know that our ideas are actually shaping the plan — not just being written down and forgotten."

The project team shares regular updates on Facebook, Instagram, and LinkedIn, where residents can follow along and see highlights from each week's progress @CommunitySolutionsInnovators.

"Every comment, every conversation helps," said Chantal Dugied, CSI's co-founder and CEO. "We're building something lasting here — a shared path forward that reflects Lake County's values, strengths, and vision for the future."

"This effort wouldn't be possible without the dedication of our residents who volunteer their time to serve on working groups, steering committees, and community discussions," said Smith. "Their commitment, creativity, and passion for Lake County are what drive this project forward."

As Phase 3 wraps up this first week of November, ECONorthwest, the project's economic consultant, will begin reviewing all the input to draft the first version of the Lake County's Community & Economic Development Strategic Plan. Once the draft is complete, it will be shared widely for public review and comment early next year.

"Special thanks also go to the Board of Commissioners and all the county employees working tirelessly behind the scenes — coordinating meetings and compiling data. Their professionalism and teamwork embody the very spirit of service that keeps Lake County moving forward," said Dugied.

For now, the message is simple: Lake County's future is being built one conversation at a time — and there's still room at the table.
